Student's Feedback

1. Teachers were guided to maintain the close proximity with every student in the class so that individual attention could be paid on improving the teacher taught relationship so that a congenial atmosphere could be created for the holistic development of the learners.
2. IQAC advocated teachers to encourage students to realize and exhibit their hidden potential by participating in extra- curricular activities. They were further told to elaborate before students the benefits of participating in co-academic activities so that they could develop qualities like healthy competitive spirit, comradeship, self confidence, lexical and oratory proficiency and leadership among them.
3. Students were to be persuaded to pursue higher education to brighten their future prospects. Moreover, they were to be counseled to continue their education to become self reliant and economically secure.
4. IQAC suggested to increase the standard of student support services and facilities available to the students so that students might feel connected and involved in the functioning of the college and their bonding with the college could be ensured and strengthened even after the completion of their courses.
